Translating a Report - Structure

As we already know, when we translate for the EU, it is important to observe the original layout and all features of the text we translate. It is not always easy to do so. In this chapter, you will translate a report's cover and content page.

Task

For this task, you will get a link to a Report on a more efficient and fairer retail market as published by the EU in 2011. Study the structure of the report in the source language and translate the first two pages (cover and contents). Bear in mind that you must include all the features used in the source text and provide a mirror translation with the same font, heading, footer, etc.

Now you

• realize that you must observe all formal features of the original text and transfer them into your translation

Eurovoc

In this chapter you will read about EuroVoc, another tool you will be asked to work with in this course. You will learn about its purpose, aim, users as well as languages that EuroVoc covers.

EU multilingual thesaurus

EuroVoc is a multilingual, multidisciplinary thesaurus covering the activities of the EU, particularly the European Parliament. It contains terms in 22 EU languages (Bulgarian, Czech, Danish, Dutch, English, Estonian, Finnish, French, German, Greek, Hungarian, Italian, Latvian, Lithuanian, Maltese, Polish, Portuguese, Romanian, Slovak, Slovenian, Spanish, and Swedish), plus Croatian and Serbian.

EuroVoc users include the European Parliament, the Publications Office, national and regional parliaments in Europe, national governments, and private users worldwide.

EuroVoc was initially built up specifically for processing the documentary information of the EU institutions.

It is a multidisciplinary thesaurus covering fields sufficiently wide-ranging to encompass both EU and national points of view, with an emphasis on parliamentary activities. EuroVoc is a controlled vocabulary set that can be used outside the EU institutions, particularly by parliaments.

The thesaurus aims to provide information management and dissemination services with a coherent indexing tool to manage their documentary resources effectively and enable users to carry out documentary searches using controlled vocabulary.

Now you know

- which languages EuroVoc covers
- what its aim is
- that it is available to the public and, therefore you can use it yourself

Translating a Report - Content

In the previous chapter the aims of EuroVoc have been introduced and so in this chapter you will use EuroVoc actively to complete a translation.

Aktivity

Your task will be translating the following fragment from the REPORT on a more efficient and fairer retail market.

You should use Eurovoc when translating. It can be accessed at http://eurovoc.europa.eu/.

When working with Eurovoc, you type in the searched expression into the simple search box. After the searched expression is found, you click on the preferred term, and its position within the thesaurus is shown (including other expressions in the same category), more importantly, you will have access to LANGUAGE EQUIVALENTS on your right-hand side. There, you can choose the language equivalent to the desired language.
